Be kind to yourself, Be kind to others, Be the change you want

The current political and social climate is putting a lot of emphasis on right and wrong, good and bad. The question is who we are supposed to be within the context of all of this.

This class will focus on self-care, healing the whole self from the inside so that we can be the change we want to see in the world, without victimization, without judgement, and with peace and civility. We will be working with your 4th chakra in the process of this.

Rev. Tom Connelly

Love and Resentments

We all want love but often what stands in the way is our resentments. They can be healed but they do fight back. After all, look at what they did to me!

Resentment sits on invalidation. It is a wound of judgment from self and from others that forms a scab of resentment to keep your attention focused outward, away from the shame of not ever being enough.

Yet love lights up invalidation. Is that a good thing or a bad thing? In this class, we will get information about the source of the resentment and how to heal those old wounds. We will also look at how to recognize love even when it lit up an old invalidation, and resolving the underlying dichotomy that has kept us confused.
